

Michael McCord, Hometown Hero

"...it is an incredible amount of fun."

Meet your neighbor, Michael McCord.

A senior at Warwick High School and a grocery clerk at Stauffer's, this guy still finds time to volunteer at the Brunnerville Fire Company.

Michael got an early start within the fire company, joining with a group of friends when he was only 15. Since then, the guys have stuck together and become part of the volunteering family, helping out their community as a team.

Michael and his buddies had no backgrounds in fire service, yet under the guide of Fire Chief Lynn Mearig, they quickly learned their new roles. In fact, Michael enjoys being part of the team so much that he wants to develop his skills for a future in fire protection. "I'm looking to gain some base experience to build upon so that I can make a career in firefighting," Michael declares, "plus it is an incredible amount of fun."

These volunteers believe in something bigger than themselves: That helping the community is a great opportunity and a rewarding experience.

Michael and his friends are also proof that you can start out volunteering at any age, and with any level of experience. You'll always be appreciated.

Your fire and ambulance companies need you. And the need is now. Learn more. There's no obligation.
